Points Of Interest

- Huntington Canyon Recreation Area, G-5 to F-3: Along SR-31 from the east Forest Boundary to Skyline Drive, characterized by campgrounds, trailheads, fishing streams and lakes, interpretive sites, and the Huntington-Eccles National Scenic Byway, west of Huntington, Utah.
- Lake Canyon Recreation Area, F-4: A system of multiple use trails, with group and individual camp sites south of Huntington and Cleveland Reservoirs, along Miller Flat Road.
- Joes Valley Recreation Area, F-6: A base camp for watersports, camping, fishing, bouldering, OHV riding, camping and picnicking, west of Orangeville, Utah.
- Big Drift Winter Recreation Area, F-3: A favorite of snowkiters, snowmobilers, back country skiers and snow boarders, at the top of Huntington Canyon.
- Ferron Reservoir: Great place for camping, fishing, canoeing and exploring motorized and non-motorized trails. At the ridgeline of the Wasatch Plateau, west of Ferron, Utah.
- Huntington and Eccles Canyons National Scenic Byway, H-6 to E-3 and H-6 to H-1: Besides spectacular scenery, the route is rich with the history of mining in Utah's coal country and evidence of today's energy production. There are ample opportunities for recreation and learning more about the natural history of area. This Y-shaped route traverses SR-31 from Fairview to Huntington and SR-264 and 96 from Skyline Drive to SR-6.
- Skyline Drive Scenic Backway, G-1 to D-9: This drive offers breathtaking mountain-top views of the Wasatch Plateau and neighboring mountain ranges. North Skyline Drive is a gravel road climbing from SR-6 to the summit and traveling to SR-31. It is suitable for passenger cars, but is closed in winter. South Skyline Drive is also a stunning scenic drive. However, it requires high clearance 4-wheel drive vehicles and is often blocked by snow drifts until late into summer. Begins at SR-31 and continues 55 miles south to the Fishlake National Forest boundary. Impassable and treacherous in wet weather.
- Ephraim Canyon Interpretive Drive, D-6 to E-6: A 1.5-mile drive from Ephraim to the summit of the Wasatch Plateau, features six different interpretive displays that describe the work of range scientists at the Great Basin Experimental Station.
- Ferron to Mayfield Scenic Backway, G-8 to C-7: This 50-mile scenic drive begins and ends in pinion-juniper country on either side of the Wasatch Plateau, but climbs to well over 10,000 feet, passing through stands of aspen and conifer, and near lakes and streams.
- Great Basin Environmental Education Center, E-6: This forest compound was once the home of scientists researching range issues of climate, grazing, soils and plants on the Wasatch Plateau and the west. It is now an educational center operated by Snow College. It is reservable for meetings and environmental educational classes.
- Stuart Guard Station Interpretive Site, G-4: Built by the CCC during the 1930s, the restored ranger station now houses artifacts from that era. It provides visitor information and is open to tours on weekends from Memorial Day to Labor Day.
- Mammoth Discovery Site, F-4: The site of the excavation of a Columbian mammoth in 1988, one of the last survivors of its species. Interpretive panels tell the story of the discovery and preservation of this unusual fossil specimen.
- Crandall Canyon Memorial, G-5: A memorial to six miners and three of their rescuers who were killed in a coal mine disaster in August of 2007.
- Pondtown Reclamation Site, G-2: Remnants of a coal mining town from the early 1900s. Recently reclaimed by the U.S. Forest Service.
