Upper Yakama people have lived in the Wenas Valley for thousands of years. Archeological sites uncovered in the twentieth century document settlements on the Yakima River at the mouth of Wenas Creek and between the mouth of Wenas Creek and the mouth of the Naches River that have been occupied seasonally for generations. The Wenas Valley offered a route to the Cascade Mountains and Naches Pass, through which travelers could reach the western side of the mountains. The Wenas Valley included a wide range of habitats, from conifer forests to grasslands to sagebrush steppe. The lower elevations of the valley provided protected areas to combat the cold winters and the creek ran year-round, fed by mountain snowmelt.
