Comments /notes on tonight's mission and this interpretation: Downloaded the incident perimeter from NIFS at approximately 2000 hours MDT on 6/7/2024.  Only a few small areas of scattered heat were detected tonight, along with a number of isolated heat sources. No growth of the heat perimeter was detected. There were several heat sources detected on the banks of the Rio Chama. Given that it is Friday night, these could possibly be campfires. The two isolated heat sources and one possible heat source on the NE side of the river were mapped and included in the IRPoint layer, and on one of the maps. The other two maps were zoomed in to the fire perimeter and the points on the NE side of the river don't show up.  The interpreter was having a lot of trouble with certain functions in the workflow crashing the ArcPro software tonight, repeatedly. The work was completed, but not using the normal procedures. If there are any issues, please let the interpreter know.  Questions or concerns, please reach out to the interpreter using the contact information above.
